AT THE END OF THE TRAIL

Down the long, long trail, toward the other side.
We drift like the passing clouds,
The springing, rippling, ripples of the sea,
The autumn, golden, golden, golden, golden,
Childhood's long, long, long, long, long, long,
The evening of life, the evening of life,
The harvest is in, the harvest is in,
We must gather the harvest at the end of the trail.

Over rough, rugged mountains,
Through valleys and plains,
Through sun-drenched deserts and dreary rains.
Through loneliness and forests we went our way.
Like a star from the heavens flashing across Planting the staff as well as the seed.
Little do we seek or little we need.
What of the harvest, shall we reap or fail?
We must gather the harvest at the end of the trail.

De we pause by the wayside to help
a friend
Over the long, long trail that leads to the end?
Do we mark the way for the one behind?
With a blessed mile-post that he may find?

Do we pass the way with weal or woe?
For the many who on this trail
must go?
Will we reap the harvest in calm or strife?
We must gather the harvest at the end of the trail.
